And I thought that this smell would surely become the smell of our family ...

The mingling of our fluids
along with our DNA, as well
as the smell
that came of it,
all made me feel as if we had become

WHAT WE DID TO SETTLE THE FIGHT BETWEEN US.

AND THIS HERE IS MANAMO ...
WE EACH TOOK TURNS.
NOBODY

THEM ARE STILL ASLEEP.

NOW, BOTH

IT'S REALLY HARD FOR THEM TO GET UP.

EVERY DAY JUNPEI'S GOT TO DO TONS OF OVERTIME, SO WORK'S PRETTY TOUGH
FOR HIM.
TODAY'S HIS DAY OFF.

REALLY?
JUNPEI

AS BOTH YOUR

The Last Lesson -- The End

AFTERWORD

To start off, I'd like to express my deepest thanks for staying with this story this long. We've finally made it to the final episode.

I'm really not sure whether I succeeded in getting this across, but as the creator of the story, I hoped and imagined that Minano sensei would be the kind of pretty neighborhood older girl who you'd imagine could sometimes be your older sister, and sometimes be your mother.

However, that's not what Junpei is like. He is a young boy who's been neglected by his parents, and who's searching for his own self and purpose in life.

It's Minano and her sisters who, while being the object of Junpei's passion, give him a real feeling of joy. It may just turn out that Junpei will live the life that Minano and her sisters hoped for.

And making him work like a slave is what they really want. In their later years, because they'll grow old sooner than him, they'll probably die with him working his hardest to care for them ...

I'm sure there are some people out there who wouldn't want to live that kind of life.

But as for me, being born into this world as a man, though I would really like to, I won't ever be able to have this kind of life.

"Your life is your own.

But to live life just for yourself is pointless.

You must try to live your life for those around you ..."

I've heard those lines somewhere, and I'd like to end this story with them.
